

Abstract

A visual programming system and method for defining application specific processing logic for various applications. The present invention provides a graphical user interface for selecting components, linking the components to form logic strings that define a control flow sequence. At least one of source code, executable code and a dynamically linked library (DLL) is generated from the control flow sequence. The present invention finds utility in connection with a control system for an electricity generating power plant.